Theaterra is a project about creating something for the people. A building based upon the input and the effort of the people themselves. Theaterra gives the people a toolkit to construct a good and functional layout together. By grading a game that everybody can play, a layout will be picked. Automatic roofs and walls are placed. Openings for doors, windows or other types can manually be added. The construction manual for the Culture Centre is so simple they can construct it by their own hands. They can call feel their home again. By using bricks and wedges they can create rib-vaults that contains the catenary line, making it structurally valid.

Covering the left over space with tiles to enclose the rooms. Finally having a masterpiece of a theater in the center of the building. A space with big catenary arches allowing light to enter and a small cool breeze.
